Letter from the Executive Director

Wonder Woman
Star Wars
Giblets

These are the words that come to mind when I think of our exhibition line-up for 2023. Of course, I'm always excited when a new season of exhibits is finalized and announced, but there is something uniquely special about this year. From superheroes, and lunchboxes, to LEGO® towers and Julia Child, each of these topics triggers a sense of nostalgia that is hard to ignore. Here are some of my personal favorites:

Lynda Carter played Wonder Woman in the TV series that aired from 1975-1979. I knew many young girls who wanted to be her, myself included. I admired her beauty, her strength and her gadgets. It's amazing how much two Styrofoam cups with the bottoms removed and red stars colored on them resembled her bullet-proof bracelets.

In 1977, my brother was tasked with buying lunchboxes for his younger siblings. I still have mine (shown here). A shiny black metal box with a red handle and an image of an X-Wing Fighter on it. While I was not a Star Wars fan, that lunchbox made me "pretty cool" in the eyes of my fellow first graders.

Finally, our family grew up watching America's first celebrity chef, Julia Child. You can't help but admire her tenacity, her unbridled joy and her fearless nature. She even inspired our kitchen from time to time. We were not afraid of butter, and yes...we ate the giblets.

All these exhibits have something in common—they have the ability to draw generations together, to make meaningful connections to our collective past and to have some fun while doing it. That sounds like a pretty good recipe for 2023. We hope to see you!

With sincere appreciation,

Christi Janssen
Executive Director

Omaha Workers: Striking a Change in History January 7 - August 6

From streetcar workers to pharmacists and farmers, striking unions have often been a tool for Nebraskans to try to earn the "good life" and fight for social causes. This exhibit, featuring nine images from the museum's Photo Archive, explores the stories of some notable strikes in Omaha. Tracing the history of nine incidents from the mid-30s to the late 70s, this photo exhibit explains what the strikers were working for and what outcomes they achieved.

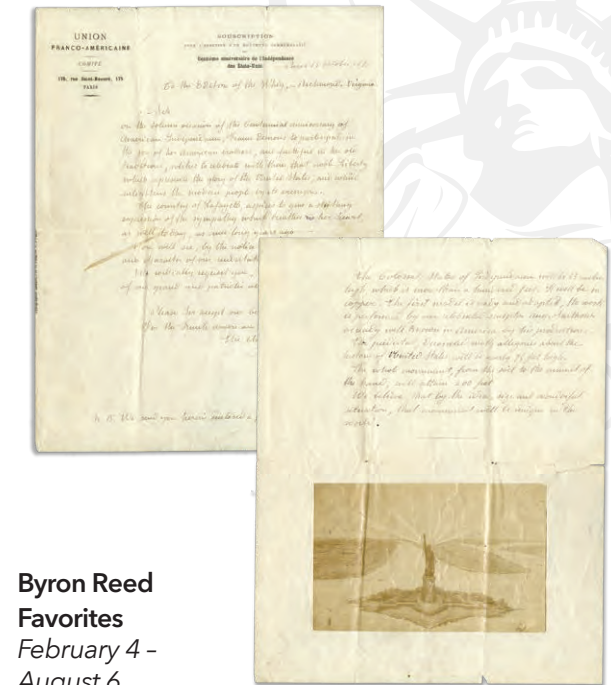

This exhibition was developed by Durham Museum Intern and University of Nebraska Lincoln graduate William James Roe.

Descendants of DeWitty February 4 - May 28

This 27-photo exhibition shares the history of the people of DeWitty, later known as Audacious, the largest and longest-lasting African American settlement in rural Nebraska. The settlers, including former slaves who had fled to Canada before the Civil War and their descendants, began to arrive in 1906-07, attracted by the 1904 Kinkaid Act's offer of 640 acres of free land in the Sandhills. The traveling exhibit is on loan from the Descendants of DeWitty, NE organization.

New and Noteworthy

Byron Reed Favorites February 4 - August 6

In the late 19th century, Omaha real estate agent Byron Reed gradually put together a stunning collection of coins, documents, books, maps and other items of great historical importance. Upon his death in 1891, Reed gave his collection to the city of Omaha, and it is housed and cared for at The Durham Museum. Only a small portion of his collection is ever on display at any given time, with the rest tucked away for safekeeping. The staff that is charged with caring for these items has chosen some of their favorites from the vault to show you. Their favorites include items related to national history, early Omaha and Byron Reed himself!

Shown from the Byron Reed Collection is staff favorite, the 1875 announcement of the Statue of Liberty gift from France.

Featuring hundreds of lunchboxes as well as one-of-a-kind original paintings, the display provides an overview of the history of lunchboxes, insight into the production process and an educational introduction to the dynamic world of collecting. The exhibit demonstrates how lunchboxes are time capsules of American pop culture from the 1950s through the 1980s. Join us for a celebration of the lunchbox and enjoy a walk down memory lane!

Towers of Tomorrow with LEGO® Bricks
May 27 - September 3

Towers of Tomorrow with LEGO® Bricks partners some of the world's most dazzling and innovative skyscrapers with the world's most popular building brick. The exhibit features 20 astonishing skyscrapers from North America, Asia and Australia constructed in breathtaking architectural detail by Ryan McNaught, one of only 12 LEGO®-certified professionals in the world.

Visitors will be inspired to create their own 'towers of tomorrow' with over 200,000 loose LEGO® bricks available in hands-on construction areas. Young and old will be limited only by their imaginations as they add their creations to a steadily rising futuristic LEGO® metropolis inside the exhibition. McNaught and his award-winning team of builders have used more than half a million LEGO® bricks and devoted over 2,000 hours to build the structures featured in the exhibition.

Towers of Tomorrow with LEGO® Bricks is a traveling exhibition from Sydney Living Museums and toured internationally by FLYING FISH.

Upcoming Lectures

IN-PERSON or VIRTUAL LECTURE—you choose!
With the Institute for Holocaust Education, featuring Jim Berk

Wednesday, March 22, 6:30-7:30PM (Museum open late, until 8PM)

The Durham Museum is honored to partner with the Institute for Holocaust Education as a part of its annual Week of Understanding, a week of programming and lectures where over 6,000 people will hear the moving testimony of Survivors of the Holocaust and Second Generation Survivors of the Holocaust. You can join this lecture in person at the museum, or via Zoom. Advanced registration is required.

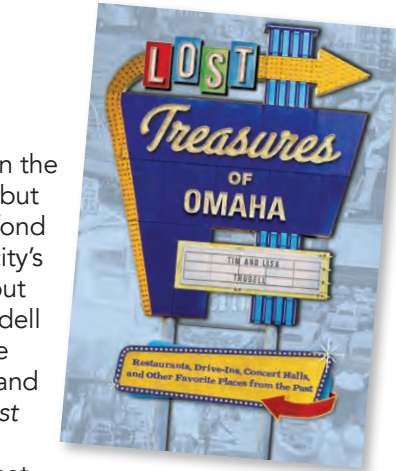

This year's speaker is Jim Berk, who will share the testimony and story of his mother, Ilona Dorenter Berk, a remarkable woman. Tough, smart, resilient. She used all of those qualities, including some miracles, to survive the horror of five Nazi concentration camps. She eventually settled in Lincoln and carved out a brilliant dress-making career. Her son, Jim, a former TV & radio sportscaster now living in the Detroit area, tells her remarkable story in a poignant, powerful presentation.

IN-PERSON LECTURE & BOOK SIGNING
or VIRTUAL LECTURE—you choose!

Lost Treasures of Omaha
Sunday, April 30, 2-3PM

What makes a lost treasure? It's always in the eye—or the memory—of the beholder, but they're typically places that bring back fond memories or played major roles in the city's growth. Having written three books about Omaha and Nebraska, Tim and Lisa Trudell have learned more than they could have ever imagined about the city they love and call home. In their newest book, The Lost Treasures of Omaha, the Trudells take a look at the places, events and people that make up some of the lost history of Omaha. Many Omaha residents recall places such as Peony Park, Aksarben Racetrack and Crossroads Mall but what about places like Here's Johnny, Nisi's Sparetime and Kelley's Bowlatorium? Join us, in person at the museum or via Zoom, for an afternoon of reminiscing about some of the 300 locations featured in the book, ranging from restaurants to foreign language newspapers, that are a part of Omaha's past. Advanced registration is required.

Tim and Lisa, residents of Omaha, own the travel blog The Walking Tourists. Lisa was a travel professional for more than 16 years. Tim was a journalist at local papers for several years and is currently the photographer, editor and author of the blog. When not traveling, they continue to explore the unique areas of Omaha.

Museum Improvements & Upgrades

Union Station's ornate Art Deco ceilings were fully restored in 1995, but some areas have endured water damage in the years since. Following the completion of a recent, multi-year restoration of Union Station's exterior, the museum turned inward to begin addressing repairs to the ornate historic ceilings of Union Station. Since early 2020, the museum has been working with EverGreene Architectural Arts, a national leader in historic restoration. Last spring, EverGreene refinished the ceiling in the Swanson Gallery (shown below). The scope of work included repairing damaged plaster, repainting large fields of color and cleaning and refinishing the cast plaster ventilation grilles over the chandeliers. EverGreene has returned to Omaha this January to complete repairs and refinish areas in the West End Corridor and Suzanne and Walter Scott Great Hall. Scaffolding and protected walkways are being erected in mid-January in the West End Corridor and the work in that area is anticipated to take approximately four to five weeks. Following that work, scaffolding and protected walkways will be erected in the Great Hall in three phases, each lasting from four to six weeks. It will look something like the renovation photo we've shown here, to the right. While entrances and walkways through the museum will change during this time frame, the museum will remain open throughout the project. Plan to visit and see the work as it progresses! The project is anticipated to be complete by the end of May.

Members and donors, thank you for your support which helps us to care for Omaha's Union Station, a National Historic Landmark.

From the Collection

Though her final dinner table was cleared long ago, the work of Omaha caterer and teacher Helen Mahamitt lives on in our collection. Helen and her husband Thomas were Black entrepreneurs who ran a very successful catering business for nearly 50 years, from 1905-1950. Shortly after returning from a course at Le Cordon Bleu in Paris, Helen opened her own cooking school and later wrote a book,

Recipes and Domestic Service. A copy of her book was added to our collection in 2021. The book is divided into four parts: Novice Cooks, Advanced Recipes, Domestic Service and Catering. She shared several of her own recipes, used at Aksarben coronations and society weddings, as well as tips for maids, waitstaff and caterers. She actually addresses "cateresses," female caterers, many of whom were also Black. She empowers them to have pride in their work and to remember that they are the professional when dealing with a difficult hostess. She includes this advice that many, not just cateresses, can take to heart: "While agreeableness is a splendid trait, [one] must possess a thorough knowledge of her work and a certain pride in its clever and tactful presentation."

Mrs. Mahamitt, 1956

Mr. Mahamitt, early 1900s
