Letter from the Executive Director

"Every individual matters. Every individual has a role to play. Every individual makes a difference."
- Dr. Jane Goodall, DBE

When I was in high school, my niece and I landed jobs with the Nebraska Resource District (NRD) in Northeast Nebraska. The NRD's work focused on conserving, sustaining and improving the state's natural resources and environment. Of course, this was a once in a lifetime opportunity. A chance to step away from the more readily available positions like babysitter, server or lifeguard and join a state-wide organization whose impact stretched far beyond the boundaries of our small town. We made our way to the "office" before the sun was barely awake and armed with shovels and a lunch box, we set out to make a difference. Our task? Eradicate musk thistles.

What this work lacked in glamour; it made up for in importance. The musk thistle is an invasive weed that can grow up to six feet tall and is extremely harmful to natural grasses and crops. It was hard work, and the days were hot and long but there was something special about the unexpected solitude and knowing that we had a cameo appearance in nature's play.

Over the years, I've come to admire that summer job more and more. On the surface, I was simply digging weeds, but a closer look reveals the important conservation work that was taking place, an understanding of how one thing impacted another and the role we play (or don't play) in ensuring nature's delicate balance.

Jane Goodall Institute

At The Durham Museum, we have had tremendous opportunities to explore and experience conservation in various ways. Past exhibits like Wildlife Photographer of the Year (2015), featured Michael Forsberg, Joel Sartore and Thomas Mangelsen, three of Nebraska's most celebrated conservation photographers. Later, Thomas D. Mangelsen: A Life in the Wild (2019) would give us front row seats to some of the earth's most wild places. This summer, we are proud to feature Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom, a nostalgic look at one of the most loved and respected wildlife programs in television history. Finally, Becoming Jane: The Evolution of Jane Goodall, will transport museum visitors to Tanzania's Gombe Stream National Park, where Dr. Goodall, studied the lives of chimpanzees, and in doing so, she inspired individuals across the globe to take action and to make meaningful connections to nature and each other.

We hope you'll take time to visit. It will, without a doubt, make a difference.

With sincere appreciation,

Christi Janssen
Executive Director

BECOMING JANE

THE EVOLUTION OF DR. JANE GOODALL

EXHIBIT ON DISPLAY
JUNE 22 – OCTOBER 13

Dr. Jane Goodall, DBE, founder of the Jane Goodall Institute and UN Messenger of Peace, braved the unknown to give the world a remarkable window into humankind's closest living relatives: chimpanzees.

In this hands-on, transportive multimedia exhibition celebrating her extraordinary life and work, visitors will explore Dr. Goodall's early years through iconic images and a multiscreen experience. Venture on an immersive projection of Tanzania's Gombe Stream National Park where she did her famous behavioral research on chimpanzees.

Visitors will also see a life-size hologram of Dr. Goodall, enter a replica of her research tent and learn about her current role as a leader in community-centered conservation and youth empowerment. Finally, visitors will find out what they can do to make a positive impact in the world.

This exhibition is organized and traveled by the National Geographic Society in partnership with the Jane Goodall Institute.

The World's Most Famous Animal Lover

Activist. Advocate. Author. Conservationist. Ethologist. Dr. Jane Goodall is all these things and more. Becoming Jane: The Evolution of Dr. Jane Goodall provides a wonderfully close look at a fascinating personality beloved by several generations of explorers and science enthusiasts.

Exhibition Highlights

- Multimedia video introduction to Dr. Jane Goodall and her work, as told through her own voice.
- Immersive projection of Tanzania's Gombe Stream National Park where Dr. Goodall conducted her behavioral research on chimpanzees.
- Life-sized hologram of Dr. Goodall.
- Opportunities to learn about the famous chimpanzees of Gombe Stream and their fascinating behaviors.
- Iconic images and multimedia that explore Dr. Goodall's early years.
- A replica of Dr. Goodall's research tent, along with artifacts, objects and handwritten letters from throughout her life.
- Explanations of the threats faced by wild chimpanzees.
- Pledge stations to inspire exhibit guests to make a positive impact in the world.

Curious by Nature!

Wednesdays, June 26 – July 31, 11AM-2PM
Activities included with regular museum admission. No registration is required.

As a child, Dr. Jane Goodall had a natural love—and curiosity—for animals and the outdoors. She never outgrew that curiosity and encourages us all to hold onto it.

Foster your child's natural curiosity in the world around them with fun family-friendly activities every Wednesday, June 26 – July 31. Join us for one activity or all three!

- Take part in Tales for Tots, 11AM-Noon: Young Jane loved to read! Join us at The Platform for a read-aloud picture book followed by recycled material crafts.
- Learn about Conservation, 11AM-Noon: Channel your inner Dr. Goodall and make a pledge to be a champion for conservation! Engage with a local organization involved in nature conservation, enjoy a themed activity and discover ways your family can support conservation efforts.
- Learn about Wildlife, 1-2PM: Dr. Goodall teaches us that we each have a responsibility to the natural world. Each week be introduced to an animal from around the world with Wildlife Encounters, learn about their native habitat, natural behaviors and what we can do to help the animals we share this planet with.

Plus, you'll have full access to visit the museum's galleries, including our Becoming Jane exhibition! In between activities, refuel at the Soda Fountain (meals and treats available for purchase) and shop for souvenirs sourced from the Jane Goodall Institute at the museum shop.

Join us in celebrating World Chimpanzee Day | Sunday, July 14

#WorldChimpanzeeDay celebrates humankind's closest living relative: chimpanzees! It also marks the day Dr. Jane Goodall first stepped foot in Gombe Stream National Park, Tanzania, to study wild chimpanzees in 1960. Honor this amazing moment by visiting a replica of Jane's research camp in the exhibit at The Durham Museum or follow the Jane Goodall Institute to learn more about how you can stand up for our closest living relatives in the animal kingdom.

Paxton & Gallagher Company: Local Values, National Reach
Now – September 1

Built into an impressive wholesale business while supplying a multitude of goods for merchants to sell in the West, the Paxton & Gallagher Company represents the accomplishments of two Omaha pioneers. Benjamin Gallagher entered the grocery business at a young age and rose to ownership of the large and successful company. Gallagher partnered with William A. Paxton in 1879 and they ran their business based on Midwest values, respect for their customers, quality products and a keen sense of innovation. Because of this, Paxton & Gallagher Company grew into one of the largest wholesale corporations in the nation and further established Omaha, Nebraska, on the map, especially with their famous Butter-Nut® brand. They employed over 400 people in the city and had businesses in ten states with branches throughout Nebraska, Wyoming and South Dakota. Their success was based on their belief that, "Honest value is the best policy."

Byron Reed Exhibit: Expressions In Writing
Now – August 25

This exhibit features a selection of handwritten documents from Reed's collection and steps into the world of "graphology," which theorizes that a person's handwriting gives insight into their personality.

Extended! Now – September 8

This exhibit features nine images from the museum's Photo Archive representing Mulehead Ranch's impact on the local land and culture.

This exhibition was curated by Durham Museum intern Eve Aspinwall, Creighton University graduate.

A Look Ahead

Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom
July 13 – October 6

The Durham Museum is teaming up with Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom to showcase the history of a television show that pioneered nature and wildlife programming and continues to educate viewers today.

Since its network television premiere in 1963, Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom has been one of the most loved and respected wildlife programs in television history. The show took viewers to the far corners of the world and studied wild animals in their natural habitats. Hosts Marlin Perkins, Jim Fowler and Peter Gros wrestled anacondas, swam with sharks and were chased by a herd of elephants. They provided a look at an often unseen animal world and emphasized the importance of conservation while creating family-friendly entertainment.

Gros has recently returned to co-host Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom Protecting the Wild alongside Dr. Rae Wynn-Grant, now airing Saturday mornings on NBC. In this series, the duo travels the nation to highlight conservation successes. As shown in the exhibit, the methods of interacting with wildlife have evolved with new technology offering more opportunities, but the message has remained the same—to protect, educate and take action to ensure the wild kingdom remains for future generations.

Featuring video, photos and objects related to the show, the exhibit highlights the origins of the television program, stories from behind-the-scenes and the work being done today to inspire the next generation of conservationists.

Meet the Co-Hosts!
Saturday, July 13, 10AM

On opening day, Peter Gros and Dr. Rae Wynn-Grant will meet and greet with guests. For updates, visit DurhamMuseum.org/wild-kingdom.

Beyond Combat: World War I Through the Lens of "Doc" Cook
November 9, 2024 – January 12, 2025

R. H. "Doc" Cook, a photographer who enlisted during World War I, served with the 88th Division, 313th Engineers and captured the company's experiences with his camera. A century later, local resident Mollie Anderson purchased a case that had belonged to Cook. The case contained his original photographic negatives from his time in the service. Anderson donated these to The Durham Museum.

Beyond Combat: WWI Through the Lens of "Doc" Cook is a temporary exhibition developed by The Durham Museum. Sergeant "Doc" Cook snapped various moments of the 313th Engineers' lives from training at Camp Dodge, working on the camp's newspaper Camp Dodger, their time overseas and the celebrations following Armistice Day. The exhibit will also feature loans from fellow institutions, including editor of the Camp Dodger Laurence Fairall's uniform, copies of Camp Dodger and trench art (decorated artillery shells).

Dr. Chattleton presents: "A Traitorous and Truculent Scoundrel" James Callender, Thomas Jefferson and the Election of 1800
Thursday, September 5, 6:30-8PM
Stanley & Dorothy Truhlsen Lecture Hall

Thomas Jefferson

The Byron Reed Collection at The Durham Museum is made up of countless treasures, including a 1799 letter between then-Vice President Thomas Jefferson and "scandalmonger" James Callender. For this lecture, Dr. Kyle Chattleton will build off the history that surrounds this document.

The letter between Jefferson and Callender, and the wider story they share, reveals much: the messy politics of the early American republic, how quickly alliances can break and who is hurt in the collapse, as well as the frictions between the government and the press. Throughout the talk, Dr. Chattleton will revel in some big questions: How could journalists be thrown into jail at America's founding? Were the scandals about Jefferson that Callender published true? Did Callender actually drown in three feet of water? In the midst of what promises to be yet another season of heavy political campaigning, Dr. Chattleton invites the local community to reflect on what the election of 1800 has to say about the current state of our politics and elections.

This lecture requires advanced registration. Regular museum admission applies, free for museum members. To register call 402-444-5072, email reservations@DurhamMuseum.org, or go online to DurhamMuseum.org/calendar.

Dr. Kyle Chattleton has a passion for American history with an emphasis on local sounds, protests and hopes. Originally from California, Kyle has his PhD in ethnomusicology from the University of Virginia and believes that life is best with an In-N-Out burger.

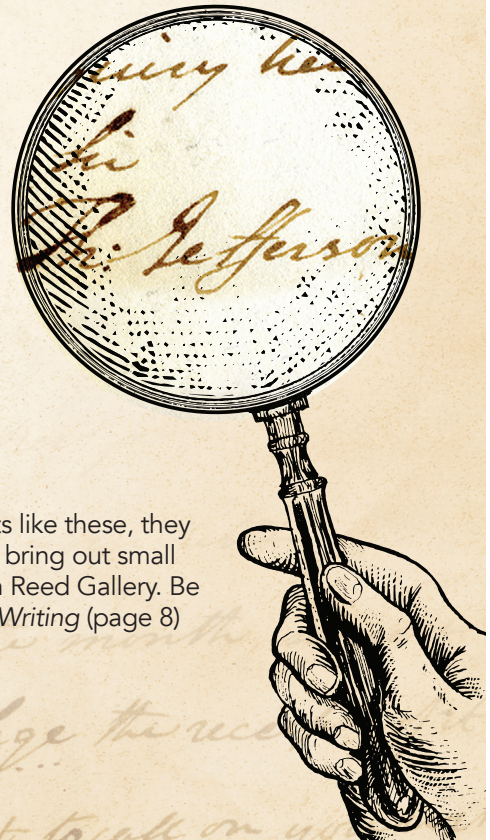

From the Collection

Byron Reed: Autograph Hunter

The Byron Reed Collection is most well-known for its coins, but Reed collected other things during his lifetime as well. The collection is full of paper money, medals, books, documents and autographs. The documents Reed actively collected range widely and include muster rolls from the Revolutionary War, reprinted portraits of famous figures and receipts for gravedigging at Omaha's Prospect Hill.

One item Reed actively sought and collected was the autographs of the 56 men that signed the Declaration of Independence. This was not an uncommon goal for serious collectors at the time. Though he worked toward this goal through most of his adulthood, Reed did not begin in earnest until the last decade of his life. Several full sets were compiled by collectors, however Reed was one of many that fell just a few short, missing five of the 56 John Hancocks (though he did get one from John Hancock!).

Documents entirely written by the signer were more desired than those that only bore their signature, but the signature was the ultimate goal. Therefore, the documents vary in nature and significance. Some are personal letters, such as a 1799 letter from Thomas Jefferson to his ally (at the time) James Thomson Callender. Others are documents of business, like a 1774 receipt stating that George Wythe received £5 for defending a man in court. There are also documents of government business, including a letter from Confederation Congress President Thomas McKean asking the governor of New York to donate money to the citizens of South Carolina and Georgia during the Revolutionary War.

Because of how damaging light is for old documents like these, they cannot be on display as long as the coins. We try to bring out small selections by way of temporary exhibits in the Byron Reed Gallery. Be sure to check out our current exhibit Expressions in Writing (page 8) featuring other signatures in Reed's collection.

2023 Volunteer Recognition

In April, the museum celebrated National Volunteer Month with our annual Volunteer Appreciation Dinner and Awards. We are incredibly grateful for every museum volunteer as we reflect on 2023. Altogether, our volunteers served over 10,000 hours in areas ranging from the museum shop and admissions to field trips and behind-the-scenes support. According to the Do Good Institute, who value a volunteer hour at $32, that equates to over $300,000 in donated time and energy.

Each year, we recognize volunteers through awards in four main categories. Please join us in congratulating our 2023 Volunteer Awards honorees.

Newcomer of the Year, Marilyn Matthews

Excellence in Customer Service, Ann Petersen

Mission Impact, Bob McCoy

Volunteer of Year, Patti Smith

Development Corner

This summer, there are lots of ways to make an impact at The Durham Museum. We ask you to consider finding a new way to help strengthen the museum and bring history to life in our community. Here are a few ways you can help the museum continue to thrive:

ROOTBEER Float Day

Saturday, August 3, 10AM-3PM

Take home a souvenir cup!

Mark your calendar for one of our favorite holidays, Root Beer Float Day! Stop by The Durham Museum to enjoy a free 8 oz. root beer float (while supplies last) at our old-fashioned Soda Fountain and celebrate with one of our signature sweet treats.

The Durham Museum's authentic Soda Fountain dates back to the earliest days of Union Station, which opened in 1931. Soda jerks still make floats the old-fashioned way, by hand-scooping ice cream and adding root beer flavoring and seltzer water. Guests will also have a chance to participate in themed activities including crafts and a root beer ring toss. Regular museum admission applies. Free for members!

SUMMER HOURS are in effect through the end of August with the museum open seven days a week. On Tuesday nights we are open late, until 8PM!
